Not illustrated. 1778 Excerpt: ...is certainly false. Mr Hume himself seems willing to give it up. I have known many who could not answer Berkeley's arguments; I never knew one who believed his doctrine. I have mentioned it to some who were unacquainted with philosophy, and therefore could not be sup This, I think, must follow, if we allow that our external senses are necessary to our preservation. And I do not see how that can be denied. A blind or deaf man may live not uncomfortably in the society of those who see or hear: but if all mankind were blind and deaf, or deprived of their reason so as to disbelieve their eyes and ears, and other percipient faculties, I know not how human life could be preserved without a miracle. posed posed to have any bias in favour of either system; they all treated it as mod contemptible jargon, and what no man in his senses ever did or could believe. I have carefully attended to the effects produced by it upon my own mind; and it appears to me at this moment, as when I first heard it, incredible and incomprehensible. I say incomprehensible: for though, by reading it over and over, I have got a set of phrases and arguments by heart, which would enable me, if I were disposed, to talk, and argue, and write, "a" bout it and about it;" yet, when I lay systems and syllogisms aside, when I enter on any part of the business of life, or when I refer the matter to the unbiassed decision of my own mind, I plainly see, that I had no distinct meaning to my words when I said, that the material world has no existence but in the mind that perceives it. In a word, if this author had asserted, that I and all mankind acknowledge and believe the Arabian Nights Entertainment to be a true history, I could not have had any better reason for contradicting that ...
