With the Black Orchid's expelled from Cherry Creek, peace has been restored...but will it last? That is the question on everyone's mind when a mutilated horse shows up alongside a voodoo alter at the new Henderson Academy. The academy, an alternative high school constructed over the cult's former underground compound, signifies a fresh start for the town and the troubled students accepted into its life-changing program. Thrust into another spiritual battle, Ted and Karen Lyons travel to Haiti for their honeymoon and mission trip, leaving behind Pastor Jimmy and the Howard women to solve the school's mysterious occurrences, never suspecting a diabolical connection between the distant locations, the Haitian Voodoo community, and two single-minded superpowers. From a rural community in Oregon, to the convicts in Cell Block E, across the miles to Haiti's Voodoo infested mountains, a new reign of evil has emerged, an evil that leaves Haitian children more traumatized than the earthquake of 2010. Their lives destroyed by the power of Jaden. Will a handful of struggling believers find a way to thwart a worldwide crisis? Or will they succumb to their own fears, mistakes, and unbelief? If the demons in charge have their way, destruction is imminent for Cherry Creek's waning warriors and the world's human inhabitants. This fast-paced tale of supernatural suspense will thrill fans of Frank Peretti's This Present Darkness and Randy Alcorn's Ford Foulgrin's Letters. Author's Note: This is the second installment in the Soul Defender's series. It can be read as a standalone, but you will gain added insight by reading book one first.
