Birdhouses, baths and feeders should be built with a specific bird in mind. Some birds are able to live in almost any kind of enclosure but most birds prefer houses and comforts that are the same size as their natural nesting places. Most birds will occupy houses of only one compartment and a single entrance but some bird species will live in colonies houses with 10 or more compartments.

The design is not a concern of the birds but the builder. Birds are more concerned about safety and comfort. Other than dimension other considerations include ventilation, drainage, accessibility and limiting predator access.

This disc is full of bird house plans, bird feeder plans with bird food recipes, bird bath plans and helpful hints when considering your own personalized designs. While you can mix and max design plans or just follow a plan from start to finish most finished bird projects will reflect the makers own distinctive touch! Check out the pics where the builders followed there own design feeling! Send us your pics and maybe we will show off your too!
